

Rare Earth News

Last November in the greenhouse (left) and look at it now. The snow storm on February 1st with the high winds and fourteen inches of snow buried our greenhouses with a strong reminder that winter's not over yet.

Winter Greetings from Rare Earth Farm!

Our "off-season" has come to an official end as this past Monday we seeded onions and leeks for the 2011 harvest. The first of our greenhouses is being heated which will house all our early transplants until the fields can be prepped and planted in early spring. Our excitement will keep growing as every day brings us closer to the first harvest of a new year. We hope that our excitement is contagious and catches up with you!

If you have not signed up for the 2011 season we encourage you to do so. There are still shares available and we hope to have a firm count on our numbers sooner rather than later. Sign-up is as easy as printing and filling out the agreement form and sending in a minimum half-payment.

We understand that the state of the country's economy among other personal reasons may prevent past members from signing up this year. If this is the case, would you be so kind as to send a brief email stating that you won't be signing up. This will help us figure out how many new members we will need to meet our 2011 membership goals.

Thank you for your time and past membership!

Sincerely,

Debra Jo Becker and Steve Young
